AN UP-TO-DATE EDIFICE

We have been shown the plans and specifications of the handsome new building for the Carmichael & Son Co. The building, in many respects, will be the most up-to-date in this section of Florida. It will be entirely fire-proof, so absolutely so, in fact that the company will carry its own insurance. The structure will be 100 feet square and two stories high, will be of cement or reinforced concrete with tile or metal roof, cement floors, steel elevators, etc. The plans show a very handsome building, though it is to be built with the idea of service and stability rather than ornamental piece of property. Work on the building will commence soon. It will probably be built right over and around the present wooden structure, giving the people the novel sight of a business firm carrying on its business while another shell is being built over and around its old one. When asked what they would do if the town ever went dry, the Messrs. Carmichael stated that they would find plenty of use for such a building, it being so well located it would always be a good investment.

A letter from Rev. L. B. Warren, who is now visiting his mother in Macon, Ga., says regarding his visit to Ocala from Gainesville, about ten days ago, which the Gainesville correspondent of the Times-Union considered such a darkness mystery: "My coming to Ocala was not mysterious, nor was my leaving Gainesville nebulous in the least degree. Harry Shaw dropped in at the morning service, consented to take the evening hour, in view of two letters handed me by Will Dale, calling me to Ocala, if the trip were possible. So I left full explanations with Shaw and Dale and bled me thence."

Government Architect John Younge has moved his office to Gainesville and when his family returns from the mountains will reside there. IN CASE OF FIRE
The Ocala Telephone company has had placed on the transmitter of their 'phones throughout the city a card bearing the following inscription: "In case of fire call central and say fire at plug —" the number of the fire plug nearest the phone being given. This is a very commendable spirit and will eliminate the uncertain method formerly in use of calling the fire station and saying there is a fire near John Smith's house. These cards should be kept on the 'phone so any one wishing to turn in an alarm can readily see what is the nearest fire plug.

A PITIFUL DISAPPOINTMENT
Grief of a Mother When the Relics of Saint Ann Failed to Cure Her Baby

New York, Aug. 3.—A little French mother, hugging to her breast a baby of wondrous eyes and shriveled legs, pushed her way through the dense crowd that, from the rising of the sun until long after midnight, surged in East Seventy-sixth street in front of St. Jean Baptist church, between Lexington and Third streets.

In the church repose what the faithful of Father Le Teller's parish believe to be the relics of St. Ann. They also believe that these relics—two tiny bleached bones, claimed to have been taken from the wrist of the mother of Mary—have marvelous curative properties when applied to in a spirit of devout piety and unflinching faith in the efficacy of prayer.

The little French mother's face was aglow with hope and love. Her strength seemed almost superhuman as she made her way through the throng that pressed against the steps of the church and trailed out across the street.

Her baby, aged four, had never walked. Its face was beautifully dimpled. Yellow curls protruded from the white cap that covered its head. The mother crooned to the baby boy as she pressed forward toward the door of the church. The baby's paralyzed limbs lay limp and motionless on a small ironing board, upon which the mother had borne her precious burden from the farthest side.

"In a little while my darling will be like other little boys," she said in French, as she kissed the dimpled cheeks. "You will be touched by the relics of the good St. Ann, mother of the blessed virgin, and you will be cured."

It was then 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The mother, with her pitiful charge, had been in the jostling crowd many hours. A half hour more and she stood strong and buoyant and confident before the priest, solemn and severe in his robes of office. Pressing the helpless baby close to her bosom, she said her rosary. With trembling lips she kissed the glass case in which lay the relics. Then she put the glass to her baby's lips, and the priest rubbed the receptacle of the sacred relics on the shriveled legs of the child.

As if floating on air the little mother made her way to the nearest exit. There she ripped the bands that bound her baby to the board, confident that he could walk and romp and play, she put him on his feet. His legs doubled over under his weight and he toppled over on the cement sidewalk. A tiny stream of blood trickled from a gash made in the baby's forehead by the fall.

Seizing the helpless boy and hugging his closer than ever to her breast, she fled down the street, crying: "Oh, Mon cher! Oh, Mon cher! adore! Your little mother has sinned again. She has sinned against the good St. Ann, mother of the Holy Virgin, would have cured you. Oh, my God! Oh, my God!"

Three cents will fan you for ten hours. Get one of those 2-inch Westinghouse fans from H. W. Tucker.

AT THE AIR DOME

There will be two subjects at the Air Dome this evening of particular interest to Ocala people, one "The Burglar's Mistake," and the other "Moscow Clad in Snow." The first because Ocala people have been hoping some of the burglars who have been pestering them would make the mistake of entering a house whose inmates were ready for them, and the other because the sight of Moscow or anything else clad in snow would be refreshing just now.

The vaudeville artist expected did not come, but Mr. Tucker expects a visit from the manager of the bureau tomorrow, when arrangements will probably be made for shows the remainder of the summer.
